Program structure

The Parkinson's Program is an evidence-driven, exercise based, multi-therapy program that gives you access to physiotherapy, speech therapy, exercise physiology, dietitian and occupational therapy. There are two versions of the Parkinson's Program, designed to suit different patient types.

- The 4-week Parkinson's Program is run on four days of the week, over four weeks. During this intensive program, you'll undertake exercise, speech therapy and small group therapy sessions.

- The 10-Week Parkinson's Program is run on one day of the week, over 10 weeks. During this program, you'll participate in weekly group exercise and therapy sessions.

Both programs have been designed to meet your physical, emotional, and practical supportive needs.

Getting started

To join the Parkinson's Program, you'll need a referral from a doctor. This could be a GP, gerontologist, neurologist or another medical specialist.

Before you are enrolled in the program, you will be assessed by a multidisciplinary team of medical and allied health specialists to determine which program is right for you.

Cost

The Parkinson's Program is classified as a Day Rehabilitation Program. Your private health insurer may have an arrangement with Ramsay Health Care to fund this program. If this is the case, there will be no additional out-of-pocket cost to you.

DVA, NDIS, and self-funding are also options accepted at Cairns Private Hospital, please contact us directly to discuss.

Who is the program for?

The Parkinson's Program is for people who have:

- Early-to-moderate stages of Parkinson's Disease
- Parkinsonian symptoms for a reason other than Parkinson's disease (e.g. permanent medication side effect or another neurological disorder).

The program is also open to people who have been assessed by a medical team and deemed likely to benefit from the exercise-based therapy.
